

Jack and Jill walk down a street. Jack walks defiantly ahead of Jill, who drags her teddy bear along behind her.

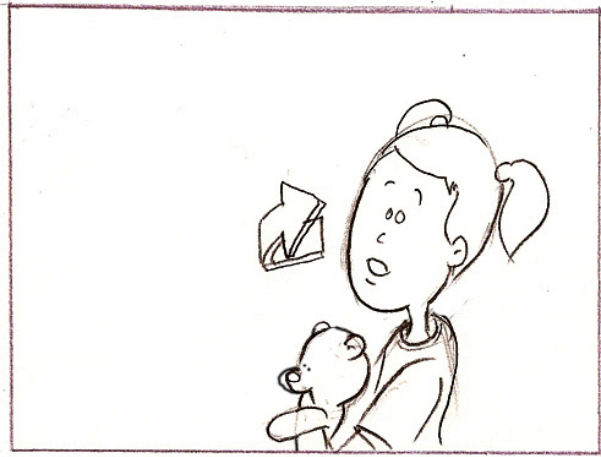

Jack turns, "I can't believe you're bringing that stupid bear." Jill responds, "He's not stupid! He's my friend!"

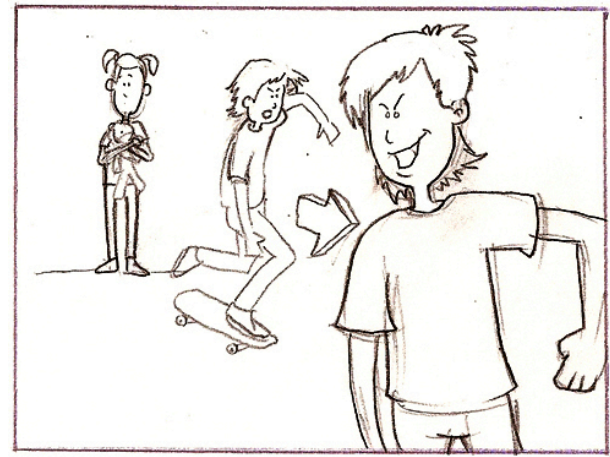

The pair arrive at the skate park.

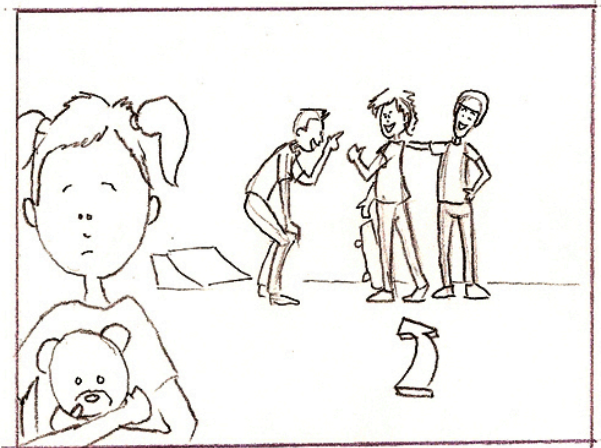

the sky is becoming overcast

"Mom said that if it rains we have to go home," Jill reminds Jack.

"I know what she said, Brat," Jack responds.

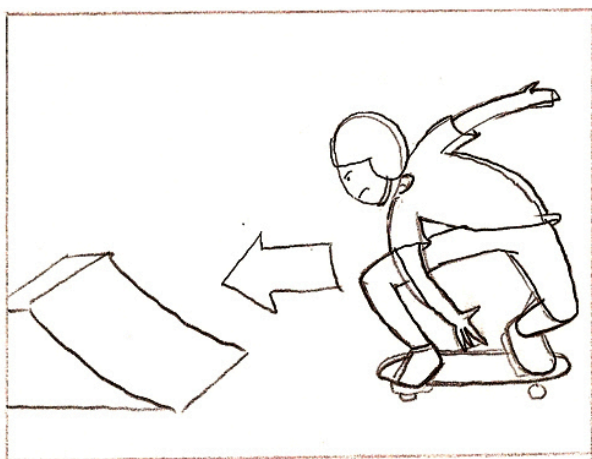

He leaves her by the curb and moves towards his friends, who are heard off camera teasing him for bringing his bear-toting sister. Jack joins the crowd, agreeing with Jill's childishness.

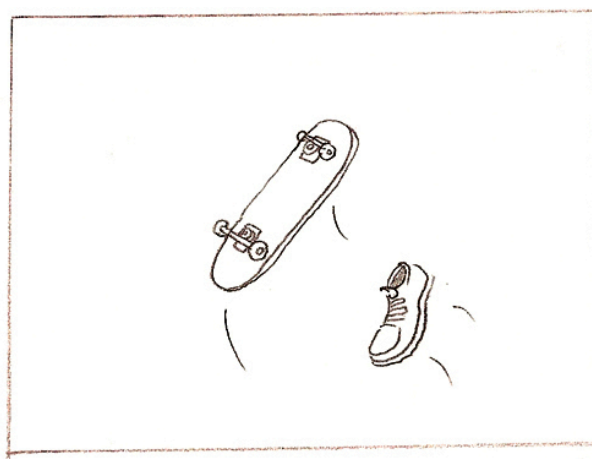

Jill is center frame, playing with her bear. Off camera, we hear the skateboarders having fun. "Watch this!" a random boarder says

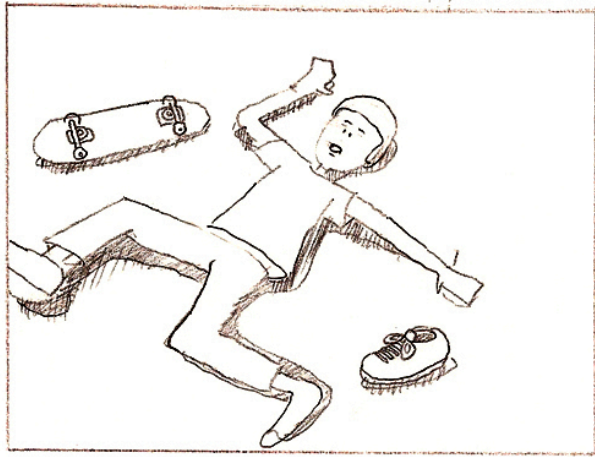

Assorted cheers turn to laughter

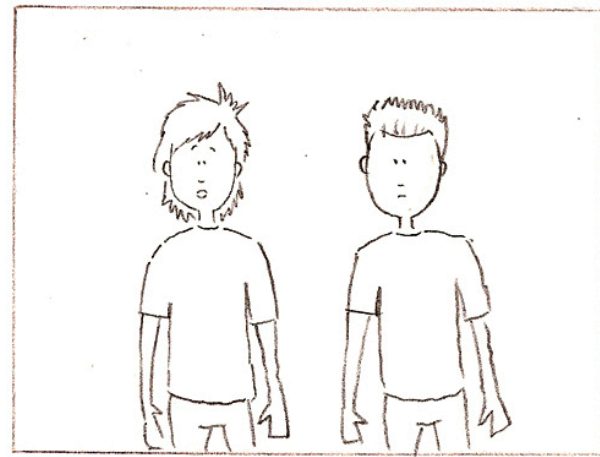

tries another jump

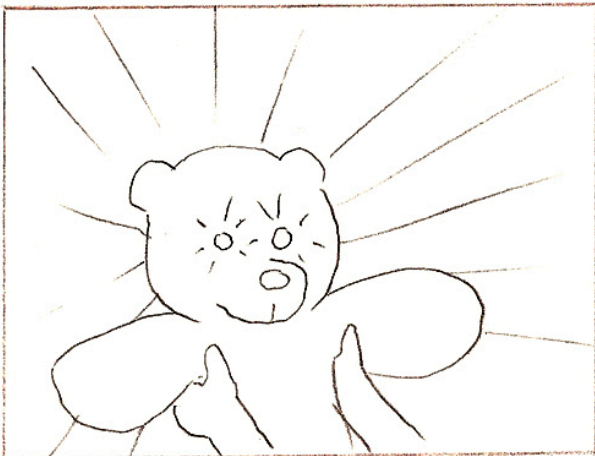

he fell

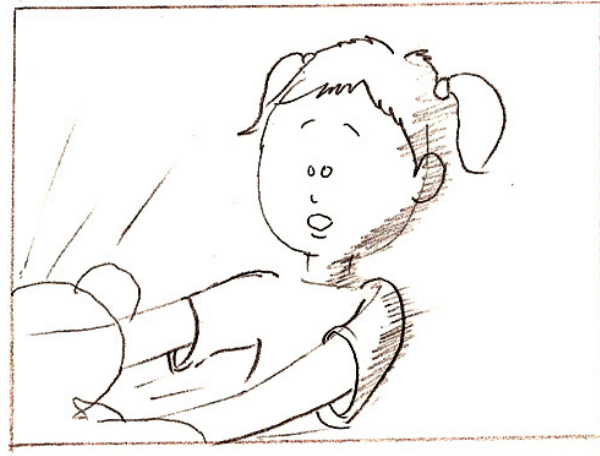

He looks hurt.

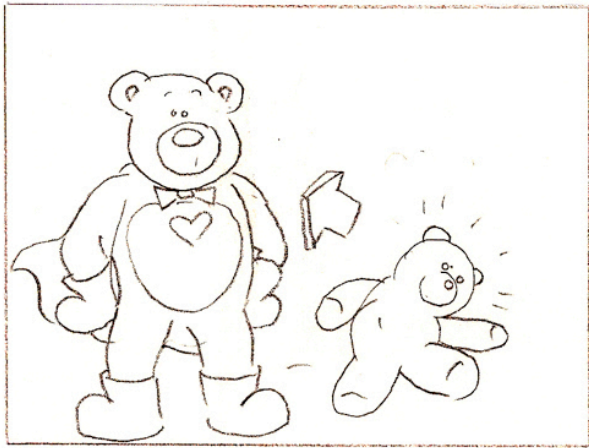

"Hey are you okay man?!" "Dude he's not moving!"

CPR Teddy's eyes (or tie) begin to glow focuses on Jill's face, as she stares at him in awe.

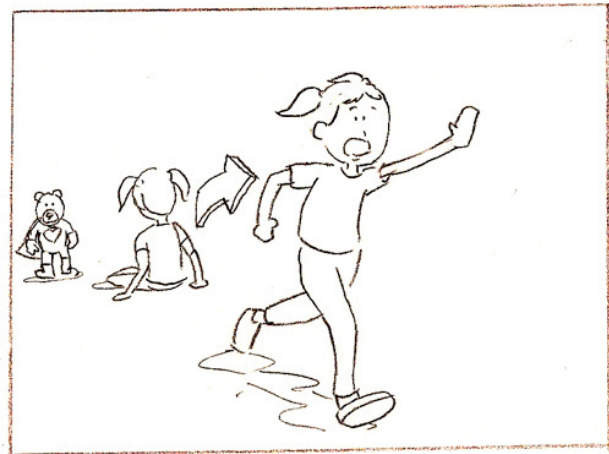

Camera cut back to CPR Teddy, who is now alive and transformed.

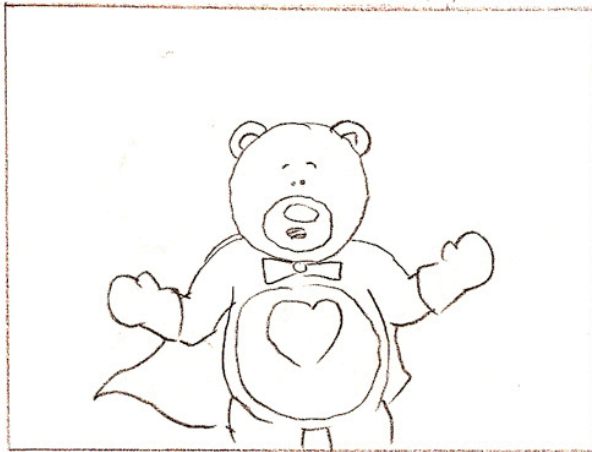

"I'm scared!" Jill explains to him.

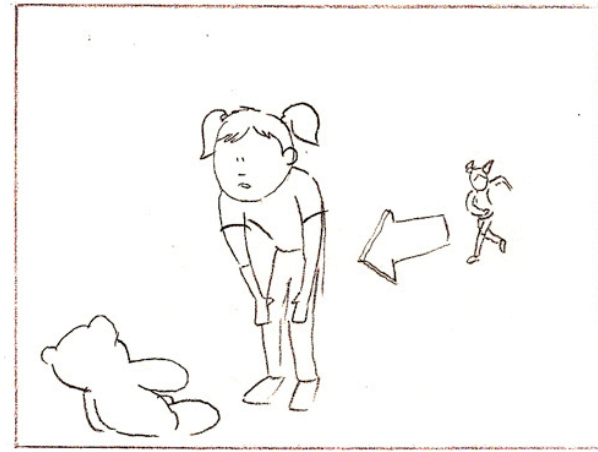

"Now's not the time to be scared. Make sure they don't touch him, he could have a neck injury."

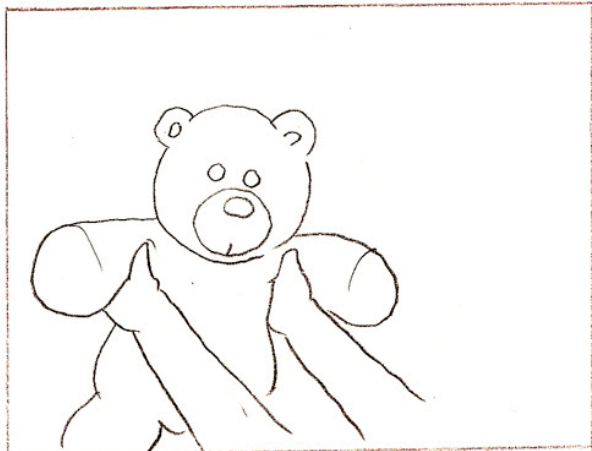

Jill gets up, and runs off camera. "Don't touch him!" we can hear her yelling off camera. "Call for help!" As she exits frame as Jill runs back through the frame. As she moves across the frame, she obstructs camera's shot of CPR Teddy.

CPR Teddy turns to camera. "If you or a friend ever fall and hurt your head neck, don't move. Make sure somebody can go get help, and ...

When Jill has passed him, he is back to being the dead Teddy

. Jill picks him up and hugs him.

"Good job, Sis...the ambulance said Tommy's gonna be okay.
Let's go home, it's almost dinner."
